Bob Brower is a Member of the firm and has been practicing law since 1972. His practice is focused on representing a wide range of closely held business owners and executives, their families, fiduciaries, and other individuals in matters involving business and estate planning, probate and trust administration, and contested estate matters.

Contested Trust, Estate and Fiduciary Matters

Mr. Brower has extensive experience in representing individual and corporate personal representatives, trustees, and other fiduciaries, and charities and individuals seeking to remove fiduciaries in contested will, trust, and estate matters. He has represented clients in these types of cases in courts throughout Michigan.

Many of the cases for which Mr. Brower is retained involve complex family disputes or situations where caregivers or others have exercised undue influence or absconded with estate assets. As an example, he represented adopted siblings in a multi-million dollar estate dispute with their adopting parents' biological children that extended over four different states and jurisdictions. In other matters, Mr. Brower has been retained to represent charities, family members, and fiduciaries in situations involving the exercise of undue influence where the challenge has been to return removed assets back to an estate or trust. Additionally, Mr. Brower has represented beneficiaries in a number of cases where a trustee or other fiduciary has acted outside of their prescribed role, including acts of self dealing or charging excessive fees, and has sought to remove such trustees/fiduciaries in trial and appellate court. Individual and corporate fiduciaries have retained Mr. Brower to defend against such claims in court or negotiations. Further, Mr. Brower has played a lead role in numerous actions seeking to construe or interpret testamentary documents. Finally, Mr. Brower has served as an expert witness in numerous cases concerning fiduciary conduct and estate administration matters.

Succession/Transition Planning

Mr. Brower has significant experience counseling owners and family members of closely held companies in matters relating to transitioning business assets for wealth preservation and estate planning. This counsel includes developing succession plans that minimize tax impacts and transition wealth to lower generation family members or others taking over the business. His work has involved many types of business entities, including manufacturers, service providers, and automobile dealerships and distributorships. In one particularly complicated matter, Mr. Brower assisted in the negotiation of a multi-million dollar sale of an automobile distributorship, with multiple owners, back to the manufacturer. The transaction involved a number of complex planning and taxation issues.

Estate Planning

Mr. Brower has an extensive estate planning practice that involves developing estate plans, setting up trusts, counseling clients on estate and gift taxation and charitable giving, and handling probate and trust administration matters.
