claims. He utilizes processes ranging from facilitative mediation to summary judgment to trials to achieve a resolution that meets the employer's goals. In an era where jury trials are becoming rare, he has successfully obtained jury verdicts for a wide range of employers. Examples include a jury verdict in favor of a hospital wrongfully accused of race discrimination in connection with the discharge of a physician and a jury verdict in favor of a steel manufacturer accused of allowing sexual harassment of a female production worker.

Business Dissolution, Shareholder Oppression and other Business Disputes

Mr. Lubben represents business owners in a wide range of commercial disputes. He has represented both minority and majority shareholders in cases to separate their business interests. In one case, he helped the majority shareholder of a radio station to acquire the interest of the minority shareholder. In another case, he helped two equal owners of a medical practice to divide their practice. His environmental experience includes defending a golf course owner against claims of environmental contamination in connection with soil erosion into Lake Michigan during construction. In addition to trial work, Mr. Lubben has an extensive alternative dispute resolution practice. He has represented clients in a variety of commercial arbitrations.

Hospital Medical Staff Privileges

In the health care area, he has acted as a hearing officer advising a physician panel in connection with a physician challenge to the termination of hospital medical staff privileges. He has also represented hospitals in proceedings to terminate physician medical staff privileges.
