the Rehabilitation Act and Michigan's Elliott-Larsen Civil Rights Act. Medical Issues in the Workplace

Ms. Willey has significant experience working with employers on issues related to medical issues in the workplace. In fact, her advanced knowledge on issues related to the FMLA and ADA earned her the title of "point person" for her peers (approximately 30 employment and labor attorneys) at the firm. She advises employers about their rights under the FMLA and ADA and stresses the potential liability resulting from not paying close attention to the laws. Ms. Willey provides clear direction on reasonable accommodation, leaves of absence, fitness for duty exams, FMLA eligibility, medical certifications, second opinions and how to work with health care providers.

Health Care Focus

Ms. Willey has considerable experience with clients in the health care industry. She works with hospitals and health systems, medical providers, nursing facilities, home health care services and regional medical diagnostic centers. The complexity of health care systems in the 21st century, the critical importance of good staff relations and the ever-present need for uncompromising patient care combine to make management of a health care facility a challenging endeavor. When working with health care human resource professionals, she keeps the focus on developing and maintaining a culture that empowers employees and provides high quality care. She understands the challenges which include:

- Peer review privilege – how to effectively review professional practices for the purpose of improving patient care and reducing morbidity and mortality
- Whistleblowers protection act – protects employees and contractees from civil and criminal liability and adverse employment actions based on complaints
- Duty to report – the health care facilities responsibility to report employee misconduct especially any disciplinary action which shows incompetence, change of status or adversely affects clinical privileges for more than 15 days
- Criminal liability – licensed health care providers practicing their professional with elevated blood alcohol or while under the influence of a controlled substance
- Union organizing

Ms. Willey is a member of the firm's Health Care Reform Team. Because of the complexity and ambiguity of the two acts that make-up the health care reform legislation, she is committed to informing clients of new regulations as they are released in order to ensure compliance.
